

Omid Dadgari

Omid is originally from Iran and moved to Canada two years ago. He joined Chor Leoni about a year and a half ago after looking for a way to connect with people who share his love for music. Music has always been part of his life — he started singing when he was young and later took voice lessons and joined a classical choir in Iran. When he moved to Vancouver, joining Chor Leoni helped him find a sense of home and community during a big life change. He loves the joy, friendship, and excitement that come from creating beautiful and diverse music together throughout the season. Each performance reminds him how powerful music can be in bringing people together. Outside the choir, Omid works as an engineer and enjoys exploring Vancouver's arts, culture, and nature. He speaks English and Persian.